Jonni Redick retired as an Assistant Chief with the California Highway Patrol (CHP) as a 29-year veteran. Her latest book, Black, White & Blue: Surviving the Sifting, shares her personal story of rising through the ranks from county clerical worker to breaking through the “less-than-one-percent” ceiling for women of color in executive leadership in law enforcement.

Jonni is the founder of JLConsulting Solutions, a coaching, public speaking, and consulting company focused on helping individuals and businesses transform into authentic and compassionate leaders. Redick has also authored, “Survival Guide” to Law Enforcement Promotional Preparation.

Redick is a graduate of POST Command College. She is also adjunct faculty at San Joaquin Delta College P.O.S.T. and the University of San Diego. Additionally, she continues her service with organizations such as NOBLE, IACP, NBMBAA, AAUW, and an executive board member of a nonprofit for underserved youth.

Within the pages of “Black, White & Blue – Surviving the Sifting”, Redick reminisces through transformational life moments, important life lessons, and her personal journey battling racial identity in a world that saw her differently than she saw herself.

What a motivating story for young African American girls to use as motivation to not give up on their dreams. But not just African American females, it is relatable to all in that it speaks to being different, having a difficult upbrings, faith, and facing obstacles; acknowledging we all have negative self-talk at some level.
